

Access to Tools for Bridgebuilders

GEOTREES' E-MAIL GROUPS and MAIN WEB PAGES: A HOW-TO-POST QUICK GUIDE

No Log-Ins, Profiles, Accounts or Subscriptions Required

Does your community, school, congregation or other organization have news, information or announcements to share with others? Or are you looking for events, news and other information from organizations and individuals, perhaps not yet known to you, whose vision and mission are similar to your own? In either case, welcome to Geotrees.Com or "the Tree," a multicultural toolkit for bridgebuilders and those committed to growing community, culture, and civilization.

This Quick Guide has all you need to know in order to read and to post at will, to visit the main web pages, and to contact us directly. For more detailed guidelines, please visit <http://www.geotrees.com/#post> on the home page.

Geotrees, "an independent, intercultural crossroads on line for communication, understanding, reconciliation and peace," welcomes news, resources, information and commentary from across the Baltimore-Washington, DC region.

1. The E-Mail Groups: How to Read and Post

Geotrees has five main e-mail discussion groups open to all, without any log-ins, accounts, profiles, or subscriptions. (You will need a Yahoo account, however, to post, but not to read the message archives.) These groups serve general, interfaith, peacebuilding activist, right livelihood employment, and cooperative housing interests. A sixth group, OurWPFW, has open message archives, but membership is required to post. All are moderated. See the "E-Mail Groups" link on the home page for details and additional resources.

2. The Key Web Pages

Geotrees offers four main web pages, also without log-ins, accounts, profiles, or registration. (Please see the home page for additional links.)

1. The Geotrees Home Page: <http://www.geotrees.com>

A descriptive welcome, introduction and overview of Geotrees as a whole, including Values and Mission, About, the Web Pages, the E-mail Groups, How to Post, Contact, and Dedication.

2. The Apples 'n Oranges Intercultural Café: <http://www.geotrees.com/cafe.html>

Featuring links to events of special value, particularly those involving bridgebuilding or reconciliation across conventional barriers and perceptions.

3. The Resources Catalog: <http://www.geotrees.com/geolinks.html>

Descriptive links to over five hundred organizations, groups and activities, from grass-roots to global. We would like to include yours, as well.

4. The World Press Page: <http://www.geotrees.com/wpp.html>

Links to English language foreign press resources, particularly those giving voice to states and societies most often misunderstood in and alienated from the West.

3. Contacting "the Tree"

To post directly to any of the e-mail groups, simply use the addresses provided above. And to contact "the Tree" about getting your link into GeoLinks, or about anything else, please send your 'mail to us at editor@geotrees.com.
